

ONE to WATCH

Max Milligan, store manager at Fraser Hart in Westfield Stratford, selects his watch of the month:

Day-Date 40, from £23,300, Rolex
Fraser Hart, Westfield Stratford, 020 8555 3568
@fraserhartuk

“The Rolex Day-Date 40 is a new size in the Day-Date collection, that comfortably sits between the original 36mm and 41mm of the Day-Date II. This is a new take on the old classic that has been worn by more presidents and world leaders than any other watch”

Reduced to Size

Only two or three of these watches are crafted a week in Germany's Nomos Atelier. A brand favoured by design and architectural-types, the watchmaker has just made its attractive Lambda range available in a smaller, 39mm size. Supremely classic, this example comes with tempered blue hands, which look great against the white, silver-plated dial and rose gold case. Like all Nomos watches, the Lambda does its bit for German watch-making by coming with a movement that is engineered in-house.

Lambda 39, £10,800, Nomos Glashütte
nomos-glashuette.com

A HELPING HAND

A watch from a fashion brand it may be, but it's certainly not a 'fashion watch': inside Dior's Chiffre Rouge C05 you'll find Zenith's Elite calibre 682 – a super reliable, automatic movement with a 50-hour power reserve. The timepiece debuted in 2004 and has now been updated with its first small complication – a second time zone whose hand is adjusted by pressing the watch's pushbutton. Only 100 will be produced.

Chiffre Rouge C05, £5,500, Dior dior.com

